Sindhu Art & Culture

The Art and Culture of Sindh has its roots in the Indus Valley civilisation, one of the earliest civilisations of the world, emerged during the second half of the third millennium (Bronze Age). The forms of art found from various sites of civilization include sculptures, seals, pottery, gold ornaments, terracotta figures, etc. Their delineation of human and animal figures was highly realistic in nature. Modeling of figures was done in an extremely careful manner. Two major sites along the river Sindhu are Harappa; Mohenjo-Daro.

Around 1200 years ago Jaina Dakshiniya Chihna described the distinguished features of Sindhis in this way:

"Elegant, with a lovely, soft and slow gait, they are fond of the art of Gandharvas (i.e songs, music and dancing) and full affection towards their country." Nasir Kalwar
